Class Routine, Feedback and Grading Policy

- EDUC 225 is a free, noncredit course designed to provide an overview of and preparation for high school equivalency tests (GED and HiSET). EDUC 225 will also help you prepare for your further academic studies and for your life outside of the formal education environment.
- This EDUC 225 Correspondence course includes regular instructor-student communication. I will provide weekly Correspondence Feedback Forms that will address your work on the assignments as well as any questions you have written to me on any papers you submit. On occasion, I will also respond to your work by writing directly on your papers which I will return to you with the Correspondence Feedback Forms.
- This course will not include official letter grades or course-specific exams; therefore, proctoring will not be part of this course. You and I will assess your reading-writing skills development throughout the course. With noncredit courses you will receive a satisfactory or "S" for your grade if you submit class assignments at least one time; however, I encourage you to actively participate. There is no Drop/Withdrawal procedure. If you do not submit any work, I will take steps to officially withdraw you from my class roll.
- CR Adult & Community Education has a Student Development Advisor who is available to meet with you to discuss your interest in registering for all or part of the HiSET as well as continuing with your academic studies and registering for credit classes at CR.
